WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 16 1885 The Archives of Monacoimnce has enabled me to make a discovery onsiderable interest, and that is that the ncipality of Monace possess some very re-kable archives, which, thanks to the dismarkable archives, which, thanks to the dis-riminating liberality of the reigning sovereign are now hoing properly classified, and contain some documents of the highest value. Up to sithin the last few years the State papers and other documents were scattered about not only a different recens of the palace at Monace, but for in 1623 the Compte de Bethune carried off from the Cleateau de Thorigus in Normandy, the principal residence of the Matigosas, three leaves of letters, which he afterwards sold to Louis XIV, and which are now in the national Library, where they form a part of what is known as the "louds Bethune." The correspondence, mutilated as it has been is still very interesting, centaining, as it does, hundreds of letters from François I and II, Henri III and IV, Catharine & Modera, Louis XIII, Richeiten, Mazarin, Gaston of Orienns, the Grand Conde, Anne of Austria, Louvois, Collect, Mushange and St. Simon, besides nearly a homomul seals of the different ableses and for an Conde, Anne of Austria, howers, the form of passengers, organic series are successful a thousand seals of the different abless and communities which were in fendal relations with the maints of Reihel, among them the impreciationally actionally actionably actionities and of the Sieur de Jouville himself.

All the survivors have fied. In Andalusia also the pestilence is spreading. At Monteguado a fourth of the inhabitants have been carried of in ten days; the town is without any physical marriage with Princess Mary of Lorraume, marriage with Princess Mary of Lorraume, marriage with Princess Mary of Lorraume, marriage with Princess Mary of them to the closer of them to compete in interring the bodies. California Volcanoe

Calthernia Veleanees.

The phenomena of volcanoes and of lays flows are exhibition a grand scale within the limits of the United States. In the Cascade Columbia through Washington Territory and Corgon into California we find a succession of magnificont volcanic conse capped with snow, so more cold and silent, but giving evidence of fiery activity in comparative recent geological sime. Some of these montains are said to voen yet can steem and the said subhurusus dones. The five islands have hitherto been under one dover one capped with snow, and the said in the California may be said to belong. It is in fact one great line of volcanic vents which may be fraced an a globe through the two Americas and Asia, bordering the great Pacific Ocean. The apparently extinct condition of many of these volcanoes within our borders may, how over, be more apparent than real. While lying dormant within the short period to winch human observation extends, they may at any time break forth anow. There are, however, but few evidences of comparatively recent complications of sakes and lara was reported to have occurred in the northern part of California, at Feather Lake, in Plumas county. It was noted at the time, or some after, by both Dr. Trask and Dr. Harbes, in communications to the California Academy of Science, the finds the vent now and the control of the comparative conditions, most of the lava flows being anoismuty. within the last few years the State papers and other documents were scattered about not only in different rooms of the palace at Monace, but in other residences of Prince Charles in Paris and the north of France, but in 1889 the Prince determined to have them collected at Monace, among them being a quantity of papers dating drom the thirteenth century, and relating to the countehip of Bethel in the north of France. Another very curious series of papers is the correspondence of the Matignon tandly, the famous Jacques de Matignon having been the ancestur on the male side of the Prince of Monaco, as Jacques Leonor de Matignon took the isolated cholera wards, moreover, have been primited for feather than the city of the city. So far Madrid itself has permitted, for fear of disturbing the nice appearance of that family in 1715. de Therigny, Baren de St. Le, Baren de la Luthuniere and Dac d'Esteuteville.

About a century age the bereditary Frince of Monace, afterwards Homore IV, married the beiress of the last Due de Manarin and the direct descendant of the Immous Cardinal, who, it will be remembered, in uniting his neice, flortense Mancini, to the son of the Due de in Meilleraye, get the countship of Bethel converted into the Buchy of Mazarin, with succession in the female line. Armand Charles do la Porte, Due de Mazarin et de la Meilleray, adauther expense, and the bank will pay itself later if seeing the future. Mistakes are of the water, which shivers solid glass resources.

Many of these abyssal fishes are bind; the Treasury receipts. During May there was a further decrease of several millions in the amount of imports, with a consequent loss of 600,000 francs to the customs. The figures for June and July have been so bad that the Treasury had been forced to pledge 4 per cent amount of imports, which can engulf fishes much larger than themselves.

There is no scientific reason, says the Lancet, to suppose that in the act of dying advance of 30,000,000 francs to meet current seeing the future. Mistakes are of the water, which shivers solid glass resources.

Religiou causes a great many, the Duc de Duras, the Duc de Mararin, the Duc de Duras, the Duc d'Aumont should each have had only one child, and that a daughter. However that may be Louise Echeite Victoire d'Aumont throught all the titles of her house to the Grimuldis, and with them of her house to the Grimaldis, and with them the archives, which had saffered but little during the Borelation. They contain a great many documents of retrospective interest, amoby others, a full investory of Cardinal Mazacin's property taken, immediately after his death.

The third section is called "Les Arcives Secretes du Palais de Moraco"—net that there is anything secret about them, and they might more correctly be denominated the "sectarial" archives. These relate exclusively to the history of Monaco and to the personal affairs of the Grimaldia before their alliances with the Matignons and the Mazarins, and they are contained in seventy—two drawers. M. Saige, who was for many years librarian of the mational archives in Paris, and who is a man of great crudition, took in hand the classification of these documents for the reigning Prince, and her found that the Monaco papers, which had never left the palace, and had not been much affected by the revolutionary movements in the principality were all resided as a first time of the way of another's happiness, or is a care in the creation of suicides so surely as a slow or thronic complaint on interaction and interaction of the senses is a predisposing cause, and the dread of an attack of illness is many times a reason. He has, however, gradually evolved order out of chaos, and among the interesting documents which he has brought to light are seventy-four letters, many of them autograph, written by the Emperor Charles V, to the Prince of Monace, notable among these being one written the day after the battle of Pavis, to thank him for his services. For the Princes of Monace are alternately the allies of France and the Empire at this period, though—as M. Saige, who is writing a treatise on the subject of the Spanish protectorare of Monace in the sixteenth century, and to whose courtesy I am indebted for a sight of the archives and of their contents, proves very clearly—their absolute sovereignty was expressly acknowledged on both sides. Louis XII refers to the Prince as "ne relevant que de Dien," and Charles V speaks of Angustine, Bishop of Grass, who succeeded his brother Lucian upon the latter's assassination by Doria, as "Received as "ne relevant que de Dien," and Charles V speaks of Angustine, de Grimatid, demino Monaci, quaice of congdant mostre." This precludes any idea of vassal age, and there is a mass of other written evidence which shows, irrespective of the treaty of 1815, that the Prince of Monaco is as much master by right in his email dominier as the Federation of the Windward Islands. An effort, which has been only partially successful, has recently been made by the Gdl outal Office to improve the government of the small group of British tropical colonies known as the Windward Islands. These are five in number consisting of Barbadoes, Grenada.

ness. The stream of lava is about three miles and a quarter in length and a mile in width. The cone is partly surrounded by this lava, but is perfect in form, and has a perfectly formed crater at the top. It is built up of scoras and volcanic ashos, the outer layers being like coarse sand. Great quantities of fine lapilli are spread out over the adjoining country to a distance of two nules. The cone is not weather worn, and is without vegetation except a bush of coanothus. The finest trees for a distance of four or live hundred yards from the cone were all killed, and their charred and decaying frunks are still lying upon the ground. Capt. Dutton thinks that the date of 1850, which has been assigned to this cruption, is correct, and that it is probably the latest volcanic cruption which has taken place in the United States. The impression of recency is conveyed by every aspect of the cone, of the lava-flow and of the country round about. This modern outflow of lava is situated about ten miles cast-northeast of Larren's Peak, in a volcanic region covering probably twelve thousand square miles, of which this peak is the center and culminating point.
